Janis Leigh Karpinski is a former Brigadier General in the U.S. Army. Her book, One Woman's Army: The Commanding General of Abu Gharib tells her Story (Miramax Books, 2005) provides a first-hand account of what happened at Abu Gharib and the bigger story behind the notorious photographs. She is now a human right activist fighting for the elimination of torture and abuse in prison and interrogation operations, including within military operations.
